

New Opportunity for South Africans to Teach isiZulu in the United States

South African English teachers, or those still in training to become English teachers, can apply to teach the isiZulu language as teaching assistants at universities in the United States through the Fulbright Foreign Teaching Language (FTLA) Program. The FLTA is a nine-month fully funded, non-degree program for early career English teachers.

Applicants must be fluent isiZulu speakers and be English teachers, or be in training to become English teachers, and be in a possession of a four year undergraduate degree or an equivalent Honors degree on or before June 1, 2016. In addition to serving as a teaching assistant of the isiZulu language, participants will interact with their host communities in conversation groups, extracurricular activities, and community outreach projects.

Online applications are available at: <http://apply.embark.com/student/fulbright/flta/>. The closing date for applications is August 14, 2015 and the program dates are August 1, 2016 to May 31, 2017.

Questions about the FLTA program may be directed to Fulbright_Program_SAfrica@state.gov or 012-431-4155.